SUPERVISORS TO GET BIDS

ional manager of adult facilities, E. L. Paderick.

When Lawson asked if the corrections department would allow the old facility to be used while the planning and construction took place he received a qualified "no" in reply.

"I don't think they will," Paderick said but emphasized that "I'll make every effort to open the bottom part ... and I think I can."

Sheriff Gene Richardson and Lawson had suggested closing the upstairs section of the old jail, making the absences of a fire escape less meaningful in the fire marshall's evaluation of the present building.

The State Corrections Department closed the jail in September for 45 days and on November 13 extended that time for another 90 days.

Paderick said a circuit court judge could reopen the jail if the State Corrections Department did not act, but Judge J. R. Snoddy, Jr., who sits in Appomattox County, would give no indication Friday night whether he would override the State Corrections Department action.

Snoddy declined to comment on this matter as he had not talked with the supervisors, he had talked with Sheriff Richardson but not with the supervisors.

If the old jail is not reopened, the county will continue transporting its prisoners to Charlotte County and housing them at a cost of $11 a day.

The Ideal Family Situation

By Suzan Eye

The ideal family situation includes a combination of sharing, caring, firm faith, a sizeable amount of openness, and discipline on the part of each member of the family.

I believe families should share just about everything: little happenings, dreams, goals, ideas, responsibility, also material things (but they aren't as important). Sometimes sharing a problem with a concerned family member makes all the difference in the world. Also, there is an art to being a good listener. Knowing just when to say, "Yeah, I know" or "Oh, really?" can help a sibling or parent to know that one is interested and really cares. I live in a family where both parents work. Therefore, when it comes to household chores, we need to share the responsibility. The housework involves too much for one person.

When we care about a family member or anyone else, it makes us feel good inside. It also makes the other party involved feel warm and better about himself. I believe families should be as close as possible, yet provide each other with privacy and solitude. This takes quite a bit of love and quite a bit of caring.

Another essential ingredient is faith in one another and faith in God. The two go hand in hand. When a family grows spiritually, it grows closer. It strengthens each person to know that whatever happens, God is there looking after him. Also, faith and trust are necessary among family members.

In my family, all of us feel that we can discuss any problem that arises with each other. If we have any qualms, we know that it is unhealthy to keep them inside. The topics we discuss range from dating and school grades to career plans and the Bible. Sure, it is a little hard to get into certain topics, but we all feel better after sharing our thoughts.

My mother and father have been kind enough to discipline me. This I need now and will need in the future. Being brought up under a firm hand has made me a stronger person. Even though I sometimes resent it, I do appreciate the discipline. Children need to be brought up in an environment where there is firm but fair discipline.

My parents, also, are disciplined. Each of them has an avid hobby. When Dad sees an old knife or Mom, a bell, if they realize that the price is too high, they refrain from buying it. This has helped our financial situation, which in turn, helps our family situation.

In this essay I have just lightly touched on the factors which can make or break a family. The ideal situation needs all of these ingredients to be successful because I believe the family is the most important unit in society.

My Opinion Of The Ideal Family Situation

Lori Lynn Coggins

My opinion of the ideal family can be stated by simply saying, "My own family situation is my opinion of the ideal family."

My family has always been very close. If one member is troubled, all the other members feel it too. Although we are close, we do have disagreements. No one is perfect. We expect each other to do their best. If their best isn't too good, we don't complain. Everyone cannot excel in everything. Basically what I am saying is that we understand each other. Understanding is a vital part of every family.

My family is fairly large, and we've been taught how to share. Sharing is important, especially now with inflation increasing. We may not always get what we want, but our needs are met. Most importantly, we have each other!

Religion must not be left out of a family! It is an important factor, especially to the future generations. Like the saying goes, "A family that prays together, stays together."

Another vital part of a family is trust. All family members need to feel like they can be trusted. Then need to be able to carry some responsibility. Trusting someone also gives them a feeling of belonging. I like to know that people trust me with responsibilities and feel that I will do a good job and not let them down. My family gives me this freedom. They let me make my own decisions. They trust me to make the right judgment. I like the feeling I get inside when they let me be me.

Love is an essential part of a family. Love goes farther than anything else. My family is held together by very strong bonds of love. We've had our share of sorrows and trials, but we've come out victorious.

My family is everything that I could ask for in a family. We're not perfect, of course, but we love each other, and in my eyes that's all that matters. I wish everyone could be as lucky as I am to be a member of a family like mine!!!

CVCC Seminar For Women

A seminar addressing the particular problems of women in the United States will begin at CVCC on January 8.

Modern women have experienced rather rapid changes in society. New freedoms and new roles have offered new possibilities for women but have created new needs, as well. GENL 106, "New Directions of Women," will explore the changing needs of women in a world of broadening and, sometimes, unfamiliar opportunities and expectations.

The course, which meets on Tuesday and Thursday mornings from 9:30 to 10:45, will help participants to acquire skills necessary to make personal, academic, or career choices through analysis of personal and career values, personal strengths and resources, scope and depth of interests, and effective self-improvement activities.
